

2024 LASG SOLIDARITY CONFERENCE SUPPORT AWARD

The Latin American Specialty Group of the Association of American Geographers is excited to announce a new solidarity award to support participation in the 2024 AAG Annual Meeting. Recognizing the barriers to equitable participation in the annual meeting, as well as the historically white-dominated space of Latin American geographies in academia, LASG will offer up to three awards of up to $200 to support BIPOC attendees, including but not limited to those at Latin American institutions or those who self-identify of Latin American descent. Funds can be used for in-person or virtual participation. Eligibility for the LASG solidarity award is limited to early career and underemployed scholars (graduate students, postdocs, non-tenured faculty or adjunct faculty, and independent or unaffiliated researchers). Preference will be given to those whose work directly relates to Latin American geographies.

To apply, please submit a short narrative (maximum 400 words) that explains how you meet the eligibility criteria and contextualizes your conference participation within current career stage, as well as a statement of any other funding available for the 2024 AAG meeting. Candidates must be current members of LASG to apply, and please send proof of conference registration with the application.
